Steve's back for more!By mattI'm a repeat customer of Steve's writing, I purchased his first book "A Clydesdale's Tale" and saved a ton on my psychiatrist's visits thanks to Steve's brand of laugh therapy. This book's no different; Steve bravely accepts the challenge thrown down by a fellow runner of completing an ultra each month for a year, and sails through it all without messing up an awesome hairdo. If you're a runner too, you'll also appreciate how the sport nurtures our family life and makes us into better and stronger people, as evidenced by what Steve shares with us in the last few pages of this volume. Thanks again, Steve, keep up the good fight. Matt. mjspain5@hotmail.com

Seeking to find the limits of human endurance and then fall far short of them, the author (of this book) accepted the challenge by "The Ultra Gang" to run 12 ultramarathons in 12 months. Nobody knows why. Written by the author of the wretchedly obscure monograph, "A Clydesdale's Tale."

About the Author Steven Latour has worn many hats over the years, and on occasion, pants. Whatever you think you know about this man is irrelevant. He is considered by many authorities to be the most dangerous man alive. He is the seventh son of a seventh son, and has the second sight. Now, he is immortal and cannot die. He will lead us to victory against the machines, aliens, or zombies. He is legend. Also, he is a ninja. And, a pirate.
