Liz Cowley : Pass the Prosecco, Darling before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Pass the Prosecco, Darling:

Bestselling Liz Cowley explores the funny side of cooking - turning her wicked wit on everything from disastrous supper parties (and people on mobile phones during them), gluten-free demons, diet fads and the clutter of unread cookbooks that collect in our kitchens like tumble weed.

About the Author Liz Cowley worked as an advertising copywriter on products for women. Her first collection of humorous anecdotes reached the top of humorous verse on and was turned into a Dublin stage show in 2010 that transferred to London. Of Irish extraction, she lives in Putney, London, with her husband.
