The more I thought about it the more I thought, "You just wasted ten bucks." Ten bucks that could go towards gas, or lunch, or...how wrong I was. It was the hit of her birthday party. Guests were flipping through it all night long, repeating captions back and forth. Afterwords it received the coveted place of honor, the bathroom. I'm not sure how you could regret buying this, and I say that about practically nothing. However, I did get the gift wrapping, $2.99 I think was the price. I was there when she opened it, kinda embarrassing. Really cheap looking. But it worked because the book is a joke, why not the packaging? Still if that's not your cup of tea, skip the gift wrap. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Really Cute and Funny for the Sarcastic Person By Shelly I purchased this as a gift for Christmas but when it came saw that there were a couple of "adult" language choices. I wish I'd known as it wasn't appropriate for the person I was buying it for. I did have someone else on my list who would appreciate it though so I did a quick switch. I wish the description had mentioned the words. They weren't horrible, they just wouldn't be appropriate for the specific individual I had picked it out for. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. i hate myself for loving this book By Cassandra Barry this silly little book makes me LOL whenever i pick it up and browse through it. the seemingly facile jokey captions are actually sort of brilliant, i think. this is a great gift book for pet lovers, i think. and even people without pets (i don't have pets. but my brother is a pet lover, so i bought it for him). it's the sort of book you might find at urban outfitters when you're looking for something fun to buy someone. only it's better than most of the crap there.

PEOPLE LOVE THEIR PETS. SOME PEOPLE LOVE THEIR PETS A LITTLE TOO MUCH. Who could blame Mr. Whiskers for trying to high-dive from a penthouse window or Fluffy for crawling into a washing machine? After being dressed up for Halloween, married off in elaborate weddings, toted everywhere in baby backpacks, or just plain coddled within an inch of their sanity by obsessively doting owners, these pets are on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Or worse. They'd call the suicide hotline—but they don't have fingers.

"This book is laugh-out-loud funny..."—Pittsburgh Post-Gazette Isn't this a festive title for a holiday book? With tongue firmly planted in cheek, this little picture book has captions to describe what some pets are really thinking. A Multipoo in a dress, wearing chic sunglasses, notes, "She dresses me 'cause it's cheaper than having me spayed." There's a bunny dressed as a skunk with the caption, "Is this your not-so-subtle way of telling me I stink?" A cat in a graduation cap opines, "A college degree in this economy? I might as well slit my wrists." —Hartford Courant More than 150 photos of dogs and cats in costumes taken by "people [who] love their pets a little too much." The author, an authority on Bigfoot for Weekly World News, has captioned each. A longhair mutt dressed in red polka-dotted booties and a gingham wrap complains: "You idiot. You've got me dressed as a Charlotte when everyone knows I'm a total Carrie." A shamefaced Yorkie in a tutu demands to know: "So where is this 'Swan Lake,' and is it deep enough to drown in?" A furry-faced puppy, posed on a tricycle with a bow plastered on its forehead, says: "I can't wait to ride it. Where's the nearest busy intersection?" Really, this one is too cute for words. —NY Daily News Praise for the website: The site posts pictures of domestic animals being made to do things by humans they really, really shouldn't, like getting carted around in a backpack-style contraption, being dressed up as "Woofgang Pup" complete with foofy chef hat and blinged-out shades, or nuzzling up to Kurt Russell's chest. —NBC.com Featuring miserable-looking pets wearing fake reindeer antlers... snapshots of bulldogs in bunny costumes and cats wearing wigs —New York Times ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY Popwatch Site Of The Day "The captions are what really make the blog successful. I actually had to close the browser for fear that I would start laughing too loudly in my otherwise quiet office building." —Phillyburbs.com About the Author DUNCAN BIRMINGHAM has worked as a teacher, a newspaper reporter, and a Big Foot expert for The Weekly World News. He writes for film and TV in Los Angeles. For the record, he loves a good cat wedding.
