giving parodys on politics, religions, the elite media. Of course, anyone who is addicted to FoxNews CNN the like may not be able to handle any such comedy/laughter. Then again, any one who likes Jon Stewart Stephen Colbert will like this. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. L'écriture en pantoufles (writing dressed down to its BVDs, maybe?) By Simon Barrett 'Il Penseroso' Satire this ain't - it's too good-humoured - and parts of it are plain puerile, but, like Fifty Shades of Earl Grey, for those of us who can't bear to read junk it provides a comparable illicit thrill, like Saturday morning TV when you're really a bit too old for it. Did I tell you I loved it? I'm taking it REEEL slow.. 4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Spirits lifted! By Morgan McCune I'd never heard of the "Left Behind series" so I wasn't sure I'd fully appreciate this read. No worries. Spirits lifted, no waiting! I'm fond of Lee's twisted cast, and I can't wait to see what happens to them next. I hope volume two's not far behind.

A parody of the fundamentalist Left Behind series, this humorous treatment of religion and politics criticizes the hypocrisy and greed of leaders of the American government and major political, educational, and religious organizations. Beneath the raucous humor lies a sophisticated examination of magical thinking and the End Times, creating a serious exposé of fundamentalist religious leaders from a secular, freethinking, humanist viewpoint.

"Earl Lee is a masterful satirist...the book is witty, sexy, and as sharp as surgical steel."—Robert Bahr, author, Dramatic Technique in Fiction
