Karen Anderson : We Put Daddy's Funeral on Visa for the Miles before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised We Put Daddy's Funeral on Visa for the Miles:

Karen Anderson really did convince her mother to charge her father's funeral to Visa for the airline miles-and she would do it again. As Americans age, so do their parents, siblings, and friends, and that means a whole new world of challenges. Although caregiving is a shared experience, it is also one of the loneliest and most frustrating. Knowing there are millions of others going through the same challenges-successfully-can be the most encouraging gift of all. "You just gotta laugh" should be the battle cry of the millions who face caregiving situations with patience, tenacity and especially laughter-if sometime through tears. This encouraging and funny book is about the often hilarious real life situations being faced by caregivers every day. Karen shares stories from her 22 years of caregiving experience along with the stories of so many others who just like her, take it one day at a time, laugh at the absurdity of it all, and embrace their lives and loved ones.
