Among today's top TV shows is Bill Cosby's "Kids Say the Darndest Things," reminiscent of Art Linkletter's book of the same title. Even beyond the funny, insightful, sometimes embarrassingly honest comments kids make, are the things they say about specific subjects like God, family, parents, the Bible, Jesus, heaven, and Prayer. Culled from youthful entries sent by parents and grandparents, schoolteachers and Sunday school teachers, and by children themselves, comes this rich harvest of wisdom, insight, and humor from today's children. Gathered from nearly every state in the U.S. and many countries abroad, this original material will sometimes amaze you, perhaps make you chuckle, but always remind you of the joyous simplicity of childhood.

About the Author Along with his wife Mary, Bill Barbour is the author of several vacation books on the subject of home swapping. After 40 years in book publishing, Barbour began writing about the methods that have enabled him to travel throughout the world at a fraction of the normal original cost. Among his books are Home Exchange Vacationing: Your Guide to Free Accommodations, and Trading Places: The Wonderful World of Vacation Home Exchange relate all of the details of successful home swapping. The books cover such topics as such how to make contact and how to live in other people's home. They also recount vacationers' previous experiences, share humorous anecdotes, and provide valuable tips. Bill and Mary reside in Florida and have enjoyed more than 80 different vacation home exchanges. They find pleasure in reading and sharing quiet times on their boat.
