Deb Hiett : When Mommy Loves Bama and Daddy Loves Auburn before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised When Mommy Loves Bama and Daddy Loves Auburn:

But then it wouldn't have been balanced and this is one brilliantly executed study in college football equilibrium. It also strikes the perfect balance between parody and tribute, so it's a no-brainer must-have for every college football fan on your gift list. Order now, before it's added to the Alabama primary school curriculum and impossible to find!1 of 1 people found the HITS HOME - NO MATTER WHICH RIVALRY YOU'RE FROM By Kincaid Having grown up in a mixed home myself (Texas Longhorns/Texas Aggies) I can totally relate to the pain and angst it can create. Ms. Heitt has captured the essence of what families like ours went through, and offers a glimmer of hope and humor for those subjected to this twisted and torturous behavior. This book is a public service to rivalry survivors everywhere - no matter where you're from, or what color your parents wear on game day. Well done! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Hilarious for all By Suzanna I don't know the first thing about college football, but this little morsel had me laughing out loud. I love how it takes us from pure childhood innocence into the hilarious grown-up dark side of sports obsession and rivalry, and back to innocence once again. How can sports fans not find this a delicious read? And anyone lucky enough to have grown up in such a divided household will likely wet themselves.

What are a young brother and sister to do, when growing up in a "house divided?" A humorous take on the classic Alabama/Auburn college football rivalry is presented through the eyes of two young fans eager to navigate the often-turbulent waters known as "The Iron Bowl Day." Spoofing the vintage style of classic children's books, this hilarious book features richly-colored, hand-painted illustrations. Definitely not just for kids, this romp is for anyone who truly understands the unique challenges of a mixed Crimson Tide/Auburn Tigers household!

"What a delight for kids and parents of split or mixed Bama-Auburn families! At last, a delightful explanation!" -- Winston Groom, author of Forrest Gump "Although the Alabama-Auburn rivalry itself is no laughing matter, this hilarious little book manages to put it all in perspective." -- Chad Gibbs, author of Love Thy Rival: What Sports' Greatest Rivalries Teach Us About Loving Our Enemies "It's great! For all of us Southerners that appreciate football, When Mommy Loves Bama and Daddy Loves Auburn is very entertaining... and so very true!" -- Missy Mercer, author of Auburn University Cookbook "A wry, delightful and very funny look at the ultimate kind of 'mixed marriage,' pigskin-style, and a primer on how families can (and should!) enjoy the rivalry in a positive fashion. We need more fans on both sides who think like Deb Hiatt!" -- Van Allen Plexico, Wishbone columnist for the War Eagle Reader and co-author of Decades of Dominance and Season of Our Dreams From the Back Cover "Beautifully illustrated and riotously funny. I love it!" -- Edward Renehan, author of Understanding Kerouac's ON THE ROAD, Dark Genius of Wall Street and other books "This is a frank and honest look at an age-old rivalry that has torn families apart. Not since the East/West Coast Swing Dancing Wars has an American pastime caused so much grief. Now the healing can begin. Knowledge is power." -- Wendi McLendon-Covey, comedic actress ("Bridesmaids," "The Goldbergs") "I've written books about weird belief systems, cults, extremist politics, and conspiracy theories. I'm pretty sure that obsessive college football fandom has a place in there somewhere--and I know that Uncle Bill, with his bizarre ideas about Paul Finebaum and the Illuminati and his abiding suspicion of the Notre Dame rule, fits right in. Deb Hiatt's and Amy Lynn Stevenson's When Mommy Loves Bama and Daddy Loves Auburn is a hoot--unless of course, it's a Masonic plot, in which case you should be very afraid." -- Arthur Goldwag, author of Isms Ologies; Cults, Conspiracies, and Secret Societies; and The New Hate: A History of Fear and Loathing on the Populist Right Sweet Biscuit Productions About the Author/Writer/actress Deb Hiatt was raised in a happy "house divided" in Birmingham, and she cheers both the Crimson Tide and the Auburn Tigers to this day. After years of performing and writing in New York City, Deb moved to Los Angeles where her short comedy film, "A Bit of Counseling" (co-written and performed with Richard Kuhlman), won the Audience Choice Awards at the Palm Beach International Film Festival and the L.A. Comedy Shorts Film Festival. Deb has created and performed two one-woman comedy shows, in New York (Village Voice called her "the bold new voice in solo . . . a sure-shot writer") and at The Second City in Los Angeles. She has appeared as an actress on "Arrested Development," "Parks and Recreation," "The Office," "Desperate Housewives," "Prison Break," "Boston Legal," and "Real Time with Bill Maher," among other television shows and films. In addition to writing and performing, Deb soothes her Southern homesickness by growing her own collards, okra, and watermelon. She's also been known to play the accordion. About the Illustrator: Originally from Holdrege, Nebraska, artist Amy Lynn Stevenson earned a B.F.A. from the University of Nebraska at Kearney in 1995. Then she moved to Minneapolis, where she worked as an artist for almost nine years. In 2004, Amy Lynn moved to Los Angeles. With one exhibit after another, art critics hailed her as "one to watch" and she was soon featured in leading art publications such as Art Collectors Magazine and Art World News. She was commissioned to do a series of paintings for the Kyoto Grand Hotel in Los Angeles. Her artwork has been prominently featured on television, including the FOX hit, "Hell's Kitchen." In 2011, she became a Disney Fine Artist and is producing her own originals and limited editions with Collector's Editions and Disney Fine Art, which are shown in Disney Galleries Worldwide.
