family I wanted to cry. Ms Hatchett has put into words the feelings and experiences of those people who have grown-up and become parents in the south. Her collection of short stories encompasses all aspects of family life. There is illness, birth, death, and sibling rivalry. The author lives in rural Georgia and was obviously very observant and sensitive during her formative years. Her description of her family is painted with love and emotion and in such detail that the reader feels that they know every intimate detail of her family life. This book IS the life of a southern lady. All southerners and those who want to share the southern experience must read this book. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. An Extraordinary Slice of Life Which is a Dazzling Treat By John Kibler I think it is incredibly unusual today to find an individual who can evoke the rare and dramatic in everyday life and to pull such marvelous wisdom and wit from it. Nora Hatchett is definitely one of those writers. No matter where you are from, these stories build upon universal themes which touch the heart and essentially ask us each to reflect on who we are, where we're from, and those individuals and events which have shaped us. . . beautiful, painful, loving ---- Simplicity has never seemed so intricate and intensely moving --- I applaud this young writer's talent, wit and ability to transform the reader to another world. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Like a Warm Fire on a Cold Night By Richard D. Stafford Hatchett's collection of childhood stories is just like sitting by a grand old fireplace in the dead of winter. Like a dream from the past, this skilled southern writer carries us away to moments of truth, love, fear, friendship, and innocence of days gone by. You want to feel good? Read this book! Every overnight visitor to your home will find it a blessing if they discover this golden treasure placed on the beside table in your guest room. In the morning, they'll greet you at breakfast with a smile...and a "thanks!"
